(Los Angeles, CA—January 20, 2026) The Los Angeles County Museum of Art (LACMA) presents a multisensory installation by Academy Award–winning Mexican filmmaker Alejandro G. Iñárritu. Rooted at the intersection of cinema and visual art, the exhibition, SUEÑO PERRO: A Film Installation by Alejandro G. Iñárritu, marks the 25th anniversary of the filmmaker’s legendary debut feature Amores perros (2000).

SUEÑO PERRO resurrects never-before-seen footage, which speaks to the film’s enduring themes of love, betrayal, and violence. These gritty vignettes—once abandoned on the cutting room floor, and buried for a quarter of a century in the film archives at the National Autonomous University of Mexico—capture the charged and interconnected sociopolitical realities of Mexico City, still relevant decades later. Drawing on the raw power and visual poetry of these forgotten images, Iñárritu reimagines their impact through a non-narrative mosaic of celluloid and sound. At the heart of the installation is a deep reverence for the materiality of 35mm film, whose physical grain, flicker, and warmth evoke a deep sense of nostalgia.

Audiences will enter a dimly lit labyrinth, illuminated by 35mm analog projectors, casting a continuous stream of newly juxtaposed fragments from Amores perros. The installation features a Mexico City soundscape that reverberates throughout the space, permeating the atmosphere like a dream. Slates, celluloid scratches, and light flares between reels will interrupt the flow—reminding visitors of the medium’s raw physicality. In an age of digital oversaturation, Iñárritu invites viewers to step into a man-made, tactile, and analog landscape of memory, where the past flickers just out of reach.

“In the spirit of LACMA’s decades-long celebration of art, film, and technology, we welcome Alejandro G. Iñárritu back to LACMA for his second immersive installation,” said Michael Govan, LACMA CEO and Wallis Annenberg Director. “While Iñárritu utilized virtual reality technology for Carne y Arena (Virtually present, Physically invisible) in 2017, he now turns to analog film, a technology that is nostalgic for many of us. Artists have long experimented with media and technology to explore new ways of engaging and captivating audiences, and Iñárritu continues to create environments that disrupt the traditional linear storytelling on and off the screen.”

“Over a million feet of film were left on the cutting room floor during the editing of Amores perros,” said Alejandro G. Iñárritu. “These intensely charged images, 16 million still frames, were buried in the National Autonomous University of Mexico’s film archives for 25 years. On the occasion of the film’s anniversary, I felt compelled to revisit and re-explore these abandoned fragments, with the grain and the ghosts of celluloid which they hold. How many films exist within a film? Stripped of all narrative, this installation is not a tribute but a resurrection, an invitation to feel what never was. Like meeting an old friend we have never seen before.”

SUEÑO PERRO is a global celebration with simultaneous presentations at the Fondazione Prada in Milan (September 18, 2025–February 26, 2026) and LagoAlgo in Mexico City (October 5, 2025–January 4, 2026). The exhibition’s presentation at LACMA is curated by Deliasofia Zacarias, chief of staff and curatorial assistant, Director’s Office.

Zacarias added, “SUEÑO PERRO is an opportunity for visitors to immerse themselves in the materiality of cinema itself; whether it’s the grain, the flicker, the texture, and the sound, they’ll be experiencing the physical craft of filmmaking in a way increasingly rare in the digital age. This dreamlike environment invites reflection, discovery, and a deeper appreciation of the moving image through light and space.”
